📈 U.S. Futures Mixed as Tech Strength Offsets Iran Uncertainty

U.S. stock futures are mixed Friday morning, hovering around the flatline as investors balance fading optimism around a U.S.–Iran deal with continued strength in earnings, particularly in tech.

- Dow futures: -161 pts (-0.3%)
- S&P 500 futures: flat
- Nasdaq futures: +185 pts (+0.7%)

The mixed tone follows a weaker session Thursday, as markets pulled back amid growing doubts that a near-term peace deal will be reached.

🌍 Iran tensions remain unresolved

Sentiment has been pressured by a lack of progress toward a permanent agreement between the U.S. and Iran.

While ceasefires have been extended in some areas, uncertainty remains high as tensions continue in key regions and disruptions in the Strait of Hormuz persist.

With no clear resolution in sight, the geopolitical backdrop is once again acting as a drag on broader market confidence.

🤖 Tech + AI strength leads the market

Despite geopolitical concerns, the tech sector continues to carry the market higher, driven by strong earnings and ongoing AI demand.

- Texas Instruments: surged over 19% after strong earnings and guidance
- Intel: jumped premarket on expectations of increased AI-driven revenue

Strong demand for chips tied to data centers and AI infrastructure continues to support the sector, helping offset macro headwinds.

💻 Software strength adds support

- SAP: posted stronger-than-expected profit, easing concerns after weaker software earnings earlier in the week

👉 Earnings trend overall remains solid to bullish

🛢️ Oil back above $100 as risks persist

Oil prices have climbed back above $100 as disruptions in the Strait of Hormuz continue.

Ongoing ship seizures, military threats, and blockades are reinforcing supply concerns, with no clear timeline for normalization.

👉 This continues to fuel:

- Inflation concerns
- Global growth worries

⚠️ Breakdown: what's driving the market now?

- Tech + AI strength = major support
- Earnings = broadly strong
- Iran tensions = ongoing risk
- Oil = elevated again

👉 Market = split (tech strong, macro weak)

👀 What traders are watching today
