📉 Markets Pause Ahead of Key Jobs Report

🌎 Futures Snapshot

Markets are trading cautiously as investors await this morning's Non-Farm Payrolls (NFP) report, the biggest economic event of the week.

- Dow Futures: -0.2%
- S&P 500 Futures: -0.3%
- Nasdaq 100 Futures: -0.8%

Technology stocks are once again leading the premarket weakness.

💼 Jobs Report Takes Center Stage

Today's Non-Farm Payrolls report could set the tone for both markets and Federal Reserve expectations.

Expectations:

- 📈 Payrolls: 114,000 (vs. 172,000 last month)
- 📊 Unemployment Rate: 4.3% (expected unchanged)

A weaker report could reinforce expectations that the Fed keeps rates on hold, while a stronger-than-expected number may revive concerns about future rate hikes.

🤖 AI & Chip Stocks Under Pressure

Semiconductor stocks are selling off again after reports suggested AI companies may become more efficient with existing hardware, potentially reducing future demand for chips.

Headlines weighing on the sector:

- OpenAI reportedly found ways to cut AI computing costs significantly.
- Meta is exploring selling excess AI computing capacity through a cloud platform.
- Investors are questioning whether AI infrastructure spending will continue at the same pace.

Premarket Weakness:

- NVDA ▼
- TSM ▼
- Samsung ▼
- SK Hynix ▼
- Advantest ▼
- Tokyo Electron ▼

🕊️ Middle East Update

Negotiations between the U.S. and Iran continue through mediators in Qatar.

Key developments:

- 🇺🇸🇮🇷 Technical talks continue with "positive progress" reported.
- 🛢️ Oil prices are easing as fears of renewed disruptions fade.
- 🚢 Markets remain optimistic that shipping through the Strait of Hormuz will continue improving.

Lower oil prices are helping reduce inflation concerns.

🏛️ Fed Watch

Fed Chair Kevin Warsh struck a more reassuring tone yesterday.

Key takeaway:

- Inflation risks have eased.
- Markets have largely priced out a July rate hike following his comments and weaker economic data earlier this week.

Today's jobs report could either reinforce or challenge that view.
