U.S. Futures Rise Ahead of Crucial Nvidia Earnings Report

U.S. stock futures are moving higher Wednesday morning as investors prepare for one of the most important earnings reports of the year from Nvidia, while also monitoring elevated Treasury yields and ongoing developments in the Iran conflict.

- Dow futures: +128 pts (+0.3%)
- S&P 500 futures: +0.4%
- Nasdaq futures: +0.7%

The rebound comes after stocks pulled back Tuesday as rising bond yields pressured sentiment across equities.

Treasury yields remain a major market focus

Markets are still closely watching government bond yields after a sharp recent surge tied to inflation fears.

- 30-year Treasury yield recently hit levels not seen since the global financial crisis

Investors remain concerned that:

- Higher oil prices
- Prolonged Middle East conflict
- Inflation pressure

could force central banks to stay hawkish longer than expected.

 Current setup:

- Bond market stabilizing slightly today
- But inflation concerns still elevated

Iran optimism helps ease pressure

Sentiment improved somewhat after fresh signs that the U.S. and Iran may still be moving toward a deal.

President Donald Trump stated Tuesday that the conflict could end “very quickly,” while Vice President JD Vance also said Tehran appears interested in reaching an agreement.

Additional optimism came after reports showed multiple oil tankers successfully exiting the Strait of Hormuz.

👉 Market interpretation:

- Supply disruptions may slowly ease
 - Geopolitical fears cooling slightly

Oil prices pull back

Oil prices moved lower Wednesday morning as traders reacted to signs that shipping activity through the Strait of Hormuz may be improving.

👉 Key impact:

- Inflation fears easing slightly
- Pressure on yields moderating somewhat

Even with today's pullback, oil remains historically elevated compared to pre-war levels.
