

PM Planning with Adam (02/06/2026)

News for Today

- Michigan 1-Year Inflation Expectations (Feb) Previous (4.0%) (10:00AM)
- Michigan Consumer Expectations (Feb) Forecast (56.7) Previous (57.0) (10:00AM)
- Michigan Consumer Sentiment (Feb) Forecast (55.0) Previous (56.4) (10:00AM)
- $AMZN (Amazon) — ↓ 8.3%: Slumped after announcing a major increase in 2026 capital expenditures, sparking investor concerns over rising AI infrastructure costs and near-term profitability pressure.
- $STLA (Stellantis) — ↓ 26%: Plunged after flagging roughly $26B in charges as the automaker shifts strategy away from electric vehicles due to weaker-than-expected demand.
- $MOH (Molina Healthcare) — ↓ 27%: Dropped sharply following a significant Q4 loss and disappointing 2026 guidance.
- $HIMS (Hims & Hers Health) — ↓ 8.4%: Fell after Novartis announced legal action tied to compounded copies of Wegovy being offered by the telehealth company.
- $PM (Philip Morris) — ↓ 0.8%: Declined as cigarette volumes fell 2.2%, despite continued growth in smoke-free product segments.
- $RBLX (Roblox) — ↑ 9.5%: Jumped after strong Q4 results and full-year bookings guidance that exceeded expectations, signaling continued user engagement and platform monetization strength.
- $RDDT (Reddit) — ↑ 8.1%: Surged after forecasting stronger-than-expected Q1 revenue, driven by AI-enhanced advertising platform improvements.

- $UAA (Under Armour) — ↑ 3.7%: Rose following earnings and full-year profit guidance that topped analyst expectations.
- $CG (Carlyle Group) — ↑ 1.9%: Gained after reporting higher Q4 profit, supported by strong deal activity in its private equity division.
- $BIIB (Biogen) — ↑ 1.1%: Advanced after beating Q4 expectations and projecting a strong 2026 profit outlook, supported by demand for newer therapies and Alzheimer's drug Leqembi.

Market Overview — Friday, February 06, 2026

U.S. stock futures are pushing higher Friday morning, attempting to recover from Thursday's sharp tech-led selloff, even as concerns grow about the massive amount of money Big Tech continues pouring into artificial intelligence.

Dow futures are up about +130 points (+0.3%), S&P 500 futures are gaining +0.4%, and Nasdaq futures are leading with a +0.6% bounce. The rebound comes after a rough session where all three major indexes closed sharply lower, with the Nasdaq suffering the most damage.

The Nasdaq is currently tracking its worst week since early April, down roughly 4%, while the S&P 500 has lost about 2% this week. The Dow has held up better and is hovering near flat for the week.

Tech Pressure Continues — Amazon Sparks Spending Concerns

The biggest weight on sentiment remains the tech sector, with investors increasingly questioning how long AI spending can expand before returns begin showing up in earnings.

Amazon triggered the latest wave of concern after projecting roughly $200 billion in capital expenditures for 2026, massively exceeding analyst expectations near $146 billion. The spending is largely focused on expanding data centers and AI infrastructure tied to AWS, which remains the core of Amazon's artificial intelligence strategy.

AWS revenue itself remains strong, climbing 24% to $35.6 billion, showing that demand for cloud and AI capacity is still booming. However, traders appear more focused on profitability timelines rather than growth alone, which is why the stock dropped sharply in premarket trading.

Amazon's announcement reinforces the broader trend: the four largest hyperscalers — Amazon, Microsoft, Google, and Meta — are expected to collectively spend over $630 billion this year building AI infrastructure.

That level of spending is starting to create a push-pull narrative in markets:

- Long-term bullish for AI dominance
- Short-term bearish due to margin compression and delayed ROI

 Earnings Still Rolling In

Investors are also digesting additional corporate earnings throughout the session, including results from:

- Under Armour
- Biogen
- AutoNation
- Philip Morris

These reports are helping round out a week that has been dominated by tech and healthcare earnings reactions.

Labor Market Data Adding Economic Uncertainty

Beyond earnings, economic signals are giving traders mixed signals about the strength of the U.S. economy.

Recent data showed:

- January layoffs hit their highest level since the 2009 financial crisis
- Weekly jobless claims came in higher than expected
- Job openings data also disappointed

Normally, softer labor data increases the odds of future interest rate cuts. However, traders are still trying to gauge how policy could shift if Kevin Warsh becomes the next Federal Reserve chair, which adds another layer of uncertainty to rate expectations.

With the government shutdown delaying the official jobs report, today's main economic focus shifts to the University of Michigan consumer sentiment report, which will give traders a fresh read on consumer confidence.

Oil Prices Stabilizing but Heading for Weekly Loss

Oil is ticking slightly higher this morning but is still set to post its first weekly decline in nearly two months.

- Brent crude: slightly higher but tracking a ~3.3% weekly drop
- WTI crude: also modestly higher but on pace for a ~1.8% weekly decline

Energy markets remain focused on upcoming talks between U.S. and Iranian officials in Oman. Traders are cautiously hopeful negotiations could ease geopolitical tensions and reduce the risk of supply disruptions, which has removed some of the risk premium from crude prices this week.

 Adam's Watchlist

- $QQQ: Looking to go long off the 602.22's KL for a push up into the 610's KL and potentially the 615's KL. If we break below, I'll be going short off the 600's KL for a push down into the 596.36's KL and potentially the 590's KL.
 - $AMZN: Looking to go long off the 206's KL for a push up into the 212.90's KL.
 - $UA: Looking to go long off the 6.40's KL for a push up into the 6.70's KL.
 - $RBLX: Looking to go long off the 67.17's KL for a push up into the 72's KL and potentially the 75.70's KL.
 - $RDDT: Looking to go long off the 163.23's KL for a push up into the 176.70's KL.
 - $HIMS: Looking to go long off the 22.20's KL for a push up into the 24.36's KL and potentially the 28.25's KL.
-

 COMMUNITY WATCHLIST

- $TSLA: Looking to go short off the 400's KL for a push down into the 394's KL and potentially the 380's KL.
-