 - S&P 500 Futures:  0.1%
 - Nasdaq 100 Futures:  0.1%
 - Thursday selloff hit markets hard:
 - Nasdaq:  2%
 - S&P 500:  1.6%
 - Dow:  ~670 points

Tech & AI Stocks Remain Major Focus

- Arista Networks reaffirmed strong margin outlook despite rising memory chip costs.
 - Applied Materials issued strong guidance, showing AI infrastructure demand continues driving semiconductor equipment sales.
 - Pinterest disappointed investors with weak Q1 revenue outlook due to:
 - Retail ad spending cuts from tariff pressure
 - Increasing competition from larger advertising platforms

CPI Inflation Report Takes Center Stage

- January inflation data releases later today.
 - Markets expect slight cooling in headline and core CPI.
 - Risk factors:
 - CPI has beaten expectations four years straight in January.
 - Strong recent jobs data suggests labor market remains tight.
 - Sticky inflation could delay Fed rate cuts.
 - Markets currently pricing:
 - High probability of no rate cuts in March or April

Gold Rises on Geopolitical Tensions

- Safe-haven demand increased after reports of:
 - Potential deployment of second U.S. aircraft carrier in Middle East
 - Nuclear negotiations with Iran weakening
- Price movement:
 - Spot gold:  ~1% to ~$4,970
 - Futures gold:  ~0.9%

Analysts Warning:

- Rising Chinese speculative demand may be fueling volatility.
 - Leverage and futures trading are increasing in Chinese gold markets.
 - Western ETF inflows and margin activity also contributing to price swings.

Oil Stabilizes but Weekly Losses Loom

- Oil slightly higher Friday but still tracking weekly declines:
 - Brent:  0.4% (~$67.80)
 - WTI:  0.4% (~$63.08)
 - Pressure factors:
 - Supply surplus concerns
 - Rising inventories
 - Reduced immediate conflict risk between U.S. and Iran
