U.S. Futures Flat as Markets Brace for Heavy Catalyst Week

U.S. stock futures are mixed Monday morning, as investors gear up for a packed week filled with geopolitical developments and major earnings from AI-driven mega caps.

- Dow futures: -39 pts (-0.1%)
- S&P 500 futures: flat
- Nasdaq futures: +37 pts (+0.1%)

The mixed tone follows a split close last week, with the S&P 500 and Nasdaq pushing higher while the Dow lagged.

Iran tensions still unresolved

Markets are once again dealing with uncertainty around U.S.-Iran negotiations after optimism late last week.

Talks appear to have stalled after President Donald Trump called off sending U.S. negotiators, signaling that tensions — and the closure of the Strait of Hormuz — may continue longer than expected.

At the same time, reports suggest Iran has floated a proposal to reopen the strait in exchange for easing U.S. restrictions, though it remains unclear if any agreement will be reached.

👉 Overall:

- Progress = unclear
 - Tensions = still elevated
 - Market = waiting for direction

Oil + macro risk remains in focus

With the Strait of Hormuz still largely disrupted, concerns around oil supply remain a key overhang.

The longer the standoff continues, the more pressure it puts on:

- Inflation expectations
- Global growth outlook

👉 This remains one of the biggest macro drivers right now

Earnings week takes center stage

This is a major earnings week, with around 35% of S&P 500 companies set to report.

So far, earnings have been strong, with expectations for a sixth straight quarter of double-digit growth.

- Verizon: shares rose after raising its full-year profit outlook and posting strong subscriber growth

AI hyperscalers in focus

The biggest spotlight this week will be on mega-cap tech names driving the AI trade:

- Alphabet
- Microsoft
- Meta

These companies have been leading the market higher through massive AI-related spending, and their results could set the tone for the next move.

Breakdown: what's driving the market now?

- Heavy earnings week ahead
- AI trade still leading
- Iran tensions unresolved
- Oil supply concerns ongoing

👉 Market = waiting for catalyst

👁️ What traders are watching this week
