Inflation Cools, But Tech Cracks Under Pressure

Markets caught a little relief after inflation came in slightly softer than feared, but sentiment is still cautious.

- Dow Futures: -0.6%
- S&P 500 Futures: -0.5%
- Nasdaq Futures: -0.5%

Initial losses improved after CPI dropped.

 CPI: Better Than Feared

Today's inflation report helped calm some of the "rates higher for longer" fear.

CPI (May)

- Headline CPI: +0.5% MoM / +4.2% YoY (in line)
- Core CPI: +0.2% MoM vs +0.3% expected
- Core YoY: +2.9% (matched)

Market reaction:

- ✓ Lower odds of another Fed hike
- ✓ Treasury yields cooled a bit
- ✓ Inflation panic eased... but not eliminated

 AI Trade Gets Tested Again

This is becoming the bigger story.

Tech stayed under pressure as investors question whether AI spending is getting too expensive too fast.

Concerns:

- Weak reaction to recent chip earnings
- Massive data center spending
- Questions around whether big tech can keep funding expansion

Premarket weakness:

- Nvidia ↓
- Micron Technology ↓
- Intel ↓
- Qualcomm ↓

👁️ After close:

- Oracle earnings
Could become another read on AI spending.

Middle East Tension Heating Up Again

Peace hopes cooled.

Headlines:

- Trump warned Iran is “taking too long”
- Reports suggest possible additional U.S. strikes
- Iran reportedly launched attacks toward U.S. positions
- Oil moved higher again

Focus remains:
Strait of Hormuz

As long as that stays disrupted:

- oil stays elevated
 - inflation stays sticky
 - Fed stays cautious
