Market Overview — Wednesday, June 17th, 2026

Fed Day Takes Center Stage

Markets are basically in wait mode ahead of the Fed.

- Dow Futures: ~Flat
- S&P 500 Futures: +0.1%
- Nasdaq Futures: +0.6% (tech leading)

Translation: traders aren't making huge bets before the rate decision.

Fed Decision = Main Event Today

Everything rotates around the Fed later.

Expected:

- No rate change
- Current expected range: 3.50%–3.75%
- First meeting led by new Fed Chair Kevin Warsh

What markets care about:

- Inflation outlook
- Rate path into next year
- Updated projections
- Tone during the press conference

Big thing to watch:

- Does the Fed signal higher-for-longer...
- Or hint the oil shock fears are fading?

🕊️ Iran Deal Details Continue Rolling In

More details are coming out on the preliminary agreement.

Reported framework includes:

- Ceasefire extension
- Reopening of the Strait of Hormuz
- Easing restrictions on Iranian exports
- Future nuclear negotiations

Market reaction:

🛢️ Brent crude → below $80

That's important because lower oil:

- eases inflation fears
- helps bond yields cool
- supports stocks

🚀 Space Trade Still Has Momentum

SpaceX keeps ripping.

Current story:

- Extended gains again premarket
- Roughly +50% from IPO price in days
- Briefly moved into the conversation with mega-cap leaders

Space names remain hot.

Tech Watch

Semis trying to bounce after recent weakness:

-  Intel
-  Broadcom
-  Nasdaq futures

Market still wants AI exposure — just with less panic than last week.

What I'd Watch Today

1. Fed statement
 2. Warsh press conference
 3. Oil reaction under $80
