Bounce Attempt After the Tech Flush

Futures Snapshot

Markets are trying to stabilize after two rough sessions.

- Dow Futures: +0.1%
- S&P 500 Futures: +0.4%
- Nasdaq 100 Futures: +0.6%

Early read:

Not full risk-on — more of a relief bounce after aggressive tech selling.

Micron Earnings = Tonight's Main Event

Tonight matters for the whole AI trade.

Micron Technology reports after the bell.

Why everyone cares:

- Memory demand has been one of the strongest AI signals
- Investors want proof spending is still accelerating
- Guidance may matter more than actual earnings

Market question:

Are companies still buying AI infrastructure at the same crazy pace?

Good guidance →

 semis rebound

Weak guidance →

 another leg lower in chips

AI Trade Finally Meets Resistance

The market is starting to push back after months of nonstop AI upside.

Recent concerns:

- valuations stretched
- capex exploding
- higher borrowing costs
- crowded positioning

Recent damage:

Nasdaq: -2.2%

Semiconductor index: ~ -8%

Money rotated into:

- financials
- healthcare
- utilities

Not panic — rotation.

Rates Still Matter More Than Headlines

The other pressure point:

Markets still expect policy to stay tighter.

Higher rates create pressure because:

- future earnings become less valuable
- financing AI expansion gets more expensive

That's why even good companies are pulling back.

Next Data To Watch

This week's catalysts:

- 📌 GDP revision
- 📌 PCE inflation (big one)

PCE is the report that can change rate expectations fast.

Scenarios:

- Cool PCE → tech gets relief
 - Hot PCE → yields rise → pressure returns

Watch Today

1. Micron earnings + guidance
 2. Semiconductor reaction
 3. Bond yields
 4. Whether buyers return to AI or keep rotating elsewhere
