Wall Street Looks to Rebound as Peace Talks Resume

Futures Snapshot

Stocks are starting the week on a positive note as easing Middle East tensions help improve risk appetite.

- Dow Futures: +0.3%
- S&P 500 Futures: +0.6%
- Nasdaq 100 Futures: +0.9%

Tech is leading the early rebound after last week's heavy selling.

Middle East Update

Investor sentiment improved after reports that the U.S. and Iran have agreed to halt recent fighting around the Strait of Hormuz and resume negotiations.

Key developments:

-  U.S. and Iran are expected to meet in Qatar on Tuesday.
-  Oil prices remain near pre-war levels after falling nearly 10% last week.
-  While tensions remain, markets are viewing renewed diplomacy as a positive step.

Lower oil prices also ease concerns that inflation could reaccelerate.

AI & Tech Stocks Trying to Recover

After last week's sharp tech selloff, AI stocks are bouncing back in premarket trading.

Premarket movers:

- NVDA ▲
- MU ▲
- INTC ▲
- PLTR ▲

Last week's weakness was fueled by:

- Reports that OpenAI may delay its IPO until 2027.
 - Investor concerns that funding for massive AI infrastructure projects could begin slowing.
 - Continued worries over stretched AI valuations.

17 What Wall Street Is Watching This Week

This week brings several important market catalysts:

-  U.S. labor market data
 -  Nike (NKE) earnings
 -  Updates from U.S.-Iran peace negotiations
 -  Lighter trading ahead of the Independence Day holiday

 Oil Watch

- Brent Crude: ~$72/barrel
- WTI Crude: ~$70/barrel

Oil remains near pre-conflict levels, helping reduce immediate inflation concerns, though markets continue to monitor shipping conditions in the Strait of Hormuz.

 What to Watch Today

- Progress in U.S.-Iran negotiations
 - AI sector recovery after last week's weakness
 - Bond yields and interest rate expectations
 - Economic data leading into Thursday's jobs report
