 Shutdown Deal Nears Completion

- Lawmakers are expected to vote this week on a compromise bill to end the longest-ever federal government shutdown.
 - The Senate has already approved funding for most agencies through January 30, with the House vote next and President Trump's signature expected.
 - Reopening the government would restore key economic data releases like the monthly jobs report, helping investors and the Federal Reserve gauge the economy's health.

 Federal Reserve Outlook

- Fed policymakers remain divided on a December rate cut, after two consecutive 25 bps cuts in October and September.
 - CME FedWatch shows a 61.9% probability of another 25 bps cut at the Dec 10-11 meeting, up from 57.8% yesterday.

 Earnings Watch — Cisco in Focus

- Cisco Systems ($CSCO) reports after the bell.
 - Expected to benefit from the AI-driven cloud boom and rising IT infrastructure demand.
 - Oklo ($OKLO) rose slightly despite a wider Q3 loss as it advances toward regulatory approval for its nuclear tech.
 - Chevron ($CVX) to unveil a strategy update following its $55B acquisition of Hess.

 Crude Oil Pullback

- Brent: ▼ -0.9% to $64.58/barrel
 - WTI: ▼ -1.0% to $60.46/barrel
 - Oil is giving back Tuesday's 1.5%+ gains amid optimism that the shutdown's end could revive U.S. demand and travel activity heading into the holidays.
