 Market Overview — Thursday, November 20, 2025 Futures Jump as Nvidia Ignites Risk Appetite

U.S. stock index futures extended gains Thursday, boosted by a massive beat from Nvidia, a stronger-than-expected U.S. jobs report, and rising optimism around tech valuations stabilizing.

- Dow futures: +366 pts (+0.79%)
- S&P 500 futures: +93.75 pts (+1.41%)
- Nasdaq 100 futures: +464.75 pts (+1.88%)

Stronger risk appetite follows Nvidia's blowout earnings, helping ease recent fears of an AI bubble.

 Nvidia Delivers a Major Beat

Nvidia ($NVDA) once again blew past expectations:

- Q3 sales: +62% YoY (first acceleration in 7 quarters)
- Q4 revenue guidance: ~$65B vs $61.66B expected
- CEO Jensen Huang dismissed AI bubble fears
- Company claims $500B in chip bookings through 2026
- Demand remains strong across cloud, enterprise, robotics, and edge computing

Shares surged pre-market, lifting the entire AI ecosystem.

A political tailwind emerged as well:

The Trump administration is pushing Congress to reject limits on Nvidia selling advanced chips to China and embargoed nations — a major relief for future sales.

U.S. Futures Spike on Nvidia Momentum

After Nvidia's earnings, all major futures jumped:

- S&P 500: +1.3%
- Nasdaq 100: +1.8%
- Dow: +0.6%

This comes after all three indexes closed green Wednesday, snapping multi-day losing streaks, even though markets remain on pace for a negative week.

Markets now look to whether upcoming jobs data will influence Fed expectations for December.

Jobs Report: September NFP Beats

The delayed official employment data finally arrived:

- Nonfarm payrolls: +119,000 (est. +50,000)
- Unemployment: 4.4% (vs 4.3% est.)

Key context:

- This report is elevated in importance due to the government shutdown delaying October data.
- The Fed meets Dec. 10, before the next NFP release on Dec. 16.
- With limited incoming data, the Fed may lean cautious and avoid a December rate cut.

Current market pricing:

~50% chance of a 25 bps cut in December.

Analysts warn: If the jobs report doesn't push expectations toward a cut, equities may stay under pressure.

Walmart Earnings Up Next

Walmart ($WMT) reports results this morning.

Expectations:

- Revenue: $177.5B (+4.7% YoY)
- EPS: $0.60 (vs $0.58 last year)

Additional context:

- WMT CEO Doug McMillon retires next year after overseeing a tripling of Walmart's value.
- Retail sector showing mixed signals this week:
 - TGT lowered guidance
 - HD warned of weaker profit
 - LOW beat earnings and raised guidance

Walmart's results will give the clearest picture yet of consumer strength ahead of the holiday season.

Oil Set for Weekly Gains

Crude prices moved higher:

- Brent: +0.6% → $63.86
- WTI: +0.6% → $59.59

Drivers:

- A larger-than-expected crude inventory draw (-3.4M barrels) reported by the EIA
- Upcoming U.S. deadline for companies to exit dealings with Russian producers Rosneft and Lukoil
- Despite this, prices dropped sharply Wednesday on reports the U.S. pressed Ukraine to accept a framework to end the war with Russia

Oil is still on track for ~1% weekly gains.
