- Marvell Technology ($MRVL) stock soared 10% after the chipmaker confirmed a multi-billion deal to buy semiconductor startup Celestial AI, as it looks to expand its compute capacity during an ongoing surge in demand driven by the artificial intelligence boom.
- Coinbase Global ($COIN) stock rose 2.1% after bitcoin, the world's most popular cryptocurrency, rebounded from its deep slide at the start of the week, climbing to a two-week high.
- Pure Storage ($PSTG) stock slumped 14% after the flash storage company failed to beat expectations in its latest quarterly results, even as it raised its full-year guidance.
- CrowdStrike ($CRWD) stock fell 1.2% despite the cybersecurity firm reporting quarterly results that topped expectations and an upbeat full-year forecast, buoyed by record customer additions, strong subscription growth and rising demand for its AI-linked cybersecurity tools.

- Okta ($OKTA) stock dropped 3.9% even after the identity management company reported quarterly results that exceeded expectations, with an upbeat full-year guidance, helped by steady demand from large customers and growing adoption of products tied to identity governance and AI security.
- American Eagle Outfitters ($AEO) stock surged 13% after the clothes retailer raised its comparable sales guidance for the full year and reported net revenue for the third quarter that topped expectations.
- Gitlab ($GTLB) stock fell 9.2% despite the software company delivering better-than-expected third-quarter results and lifting full-year revenue guidance.
- Acadia Healthcare ($ACHC) stock slumped 28% after the healthcare company revised its fiscal year 2025 guidance downward, raising concerns about the company's future earnings potential.
- Oracle ($ORCL) stock gained 1.8% after Wells Fargo started coverage of the tech giant with an 'overweight' recommendation, describing the firm as an "emerging leader in the AI super-cycle."

 Market Overview — Wednesday, December 3, 2025

 Futures Rise / Sentiment Steadies

- U.S. stock futures edged higher early Wednesday as Fed rate-cut optimism and a Bitcoin rebound lifted risk appetite.
 - Dow +0.2% (+115 pts)
 - S&P 500 +0.2% (+13 pts)
 - Nasdaq 100 +0.2% (+40 pts)
 - The prior session saw a broad rebound after Monday's risk-off tone faded.

Fed Rate Cut Expectations Grow

- Traders are increasingly confident the Fed will cut rates by 25 bps at the Dec 9-10 meeting.
- CME FedWatch shows ~87% odds of a cut.
- Investors expect the Fed to ease policy to support a weakening labor market, despite stubborn inflation pockets.

Key Data Ahead

- Today: ADP private payrolls → first look at labor strength.
 - Friday:
 - PCE Inflation (Fed's #1 metric)
 - Personal Income & Spending
 - PCE will heavily influence expectations around how aggressively the Fed cuts beyond December.

Bitcoin Rebounds

- Bitcoin bounced back above the mid-$90K range after sharp declines earlier this week.
 - The recovery boosted crypto-linked stocks and helped strengthen sentiment in tech and risk assets.

Marvell Confirms Celestial AI Deal

- Marvell Technology (MRVL) announced a $3.25B acquisition of Celestial AI.
 - Strategic advantage:
 - Access to photonics tech → using light instead of electrical signals
 - Enhances high-performance connectivity between AI accelerators and memory
 - Revenue impact from the deal expected in Marvell's FY 2028 (H2).
 - Also in focus after earnings:
 - Pure Storage (PSTG)
 - CrowdStrike (CRWD)
 - Okta (OKTA)

 Oil Surges

- Crude prices jumped as Ukraine peace talks stalled, keeping supply risks elevated.
- Brent +1.2% → $63.22
- WTI +1.4% → $59.48

Drivers:

- No breakthrough after a major meeting between Putin and U.S. envoys Steve Witkoff & Jared Kushner.
- Sanctions relief (and supply increases) remain unlikely near-term.
- U.S. API data: Crude inventories +2.48M barrels last week → raising surplus concerns.
- Traders await EIA official stockpile data later today.
