 Market Overview — Friday, December 5, 2025 Futures Drift as Wall Street Awaits Key Inflation Data

U.S. stock futures traded in tight ranges Friday, with traders holding back ahead of the PCE inflation report, the Fed's preferred gauge.

- Dow Jones Futures: -0.1%
- S&P 500 Futures: +0.2%
- Nasdaq 100 Futures: +0.4%

The major indices ended Thursday mixed, but all three are still slightly green for the week.

 PCE INFLATION IN FOCUS

Traders are anticipating on a 25 bps Fed rate cut next week, with probabilities sitting around 87%.

Recent data helped fuel those expectations:

- Jobless claims plunged by 27K to 191K — the lowest since 2022
- ADP showed -32,000 private payrolls, the largest drop in 2.5 years
- Challenger report: layoffs fell sharply, but hiring remains soft

Now, the spotlight is on the Core PCE Price Index, expected to hold:

- +2.9% YoY
- +0.2% MoM

A soft PCE print would pump confidence even more that the Fed cuts next week.

Fed Leadership Speculation

Market chatter is heating up after reports that the Trump team cancelled interviews with other Fed chair candidates.

This boosted expectations that Kevin Hasset — seen as more dovish than Powell — may take over in 2026.

Corporate Spotlight: Netflix Takes Aim at Hollywood

Netflix ($NFLX) is in exclusive talks to buy Warner Bros Discovery's film and TV studios, plus the HBO/Max streaming business.

- Offered $28/share
- Would turn Netflix into a full-on media empire with one of the strongest content libraries in the world
- A deal could be announced imminently

Ulta Beauty ($ULTA) also popped after crushing earnings and raising guidance. HPE ($HPE) sank after missing revenue expectations.

Oil Steadies Into the Weekend

Crude prices are holding Thursday's gains:

- Brent: $63.24 (-0.1%)
- WTI: $59.60 (-0.1%)

Despite today's pause:

- WTI is on track for a 1.5% weekly gain
 - Diplomatic talks on Ukraine stalled, keeping a risk premium in energy markets
