UBS: 50% U.S. Tariffs Could Sink Eurozone Into Recession

Trump's Threat: 50% EU Tariffs

- Delayed to July 9 after call with EU President von der Leyen, but UBS warns this is a fragile truce.
 - UBS sees a high risk of escalation: current status is “not a stable equilibrium.”

UBS Economic Projections if Tariffs Hit

- Previously forecasted 20% tariffs (from April) would:
 - Knock -0.7 pp off EU GDP.
 - Cause technical recession in H2 2025.
 - A 50% tariff, roughly double April's effective rate, would:
 - Cut EU GDP forecasts to:
 -  0.4% (2025)
 -  0.5% (2026)
 - Down from prior:
 - 0.7% (2025)
 - 1.0% (2026)
 - Q2 2025 activity could be front-loaded as firms rush to ship before tariffs, followed by Q3-Q4 weakness.

Inflation Impact? Disinflation Now, But Risk Ahead

- Initial shock = disinflationary
 - If EU retaliates, inflation may rebound — especially if €21B or €95B tariff lists are triggered.

EU Retaliation Locked and Loaded

- €21B tariff package delayed until July 14.
- €95B package in public consultation.
- Brussels views Trump's sector-wide tariffs as "unacceptable."

UBS: "Recent developments increase the odds tariffs remain elevated beyond July, denting global growth and raising inflation risks."
